ARSC TO HOLD CONFERENCE

The Ninth Annual Conference of the Association for Recorded Sound Collections (ARSC) will be held in Montreal, Canada, from August 17-23, 1975, on the grounds of McGill University. It will be held jointly with the International Association of Sound Archives (IASA) and the International Association of Music Libraries (IAML). Various workshops on Oral History, Record Libraries, and current Discographical Standards will be presented as well as a tour of Radio Canada, and a visit to the Public Sound Archives in Ottawa. Among the featured talks will be an important paper delivered by Ray Wile, entitled The Rise and Fall of the Edison Speaking Phonograph Company. APM plans to issue this paper as a separate and enlarged Monograph in a new series of publications.

DEAR APM:

Question: What is the significance of the little number on the rims of Blue Amberol cylinders, the one right after the word "PAT'D"?

F.O., Buffalo, N.Y.

Answer: The original wax master cylinder which was cut during the recording session had about 97 grooves per inch, and eventually had to be approved by Edison himself. When passed, one electro-plated master (male) mold of copper was made from each original female master record. From this copper mold, any number of female wax sub-masters could be made, now with contraction, yielding 98½ grooves to the inch. These were not sold, but used again to make a series of working male sub-master copper molds (one mold from each wax sub-master). From this generation of molds, the final celluloid Blue Amberols were made under intense steam pressure, with the title, artist, etc. engraved on the rims, and now with 100 grooves per inch. The little number after PAT'D indicated the quantity of male sub-master molds that were made (bold print above). A popular title might go as high as 312, the highest known, for Blue Amberol #1547, Silver Threads Among the Gold by Will Oakland. Titles made in small quantities, like the operatic 28,000 and 29,000 series, will usually have low numbers. Once we learn approximately how many records could be produced from each working mold, we may be able to extrapolate actual production figures for different titles. There is also the

Yes, you can have your tobacco and Nipper too! Here he is, about 3¼" tall, listening to an uninspired version of the Berliner Trademark Gramophone. We thought this might be a home-made smoking set, but luckily found the original Bill of Sale, dated September 7, 1907, showing that the entire unit was manufactured by Chevob & Co. of Geneva, Switzerland [See p. 5]. The music begins to play and Nipper's head begins to turn when the tiny metal matchbox cover is flipped back. (See musical movement on p. 5)

This music box movement plays two different tunes, recently identified as Waltz from Faust and Amaryllis. A small toothed wheel operates a stiff wire which causes Nipper's head to turn in time to the music. The winding key is underneath the baseboard.

Emile Berliner stated in his American trademark application that he had first used this design commercially on May 24, 1900, but no American example of this ad has ever been found with Berliner's name. The first advertising use anywhere of His Master's Voice occurred in England during Christmas of 1899, but he was most popular in the U.S.

BOOK REVIEW

In 1949, collectors of music boxes formed their own organization and began publication of a regular journal. Over the years, it has grown from a modest, mimeographed brochure to a substantial off-set magazine sent all over the world. Only recently has the Musical Box Society International celebrated their 25th Anniversary with a giant convention, and now they have gathered many of the past articles and features from their Bulletin into an enormous, indexed volume of 992 pages, entitled Silver Anniversary Collection.

The handsome, hard-cover book is divided into several sections, including History, Cylinder Boxes, Disc Boxes, Repairs, Nickelodeons, Violin Players, Small and Large Organs, Player Pianos, Automata, and finally, a 50-page chapter on Phonographs! Since "talking machines" have not always been wholly welcome to music box fans, it is a pleasant surprise to report that the material presented is accurate for the most part.

Serious phonograph collectors will not find much new information in this particular chapter, with the possible exception of Peter Rose's excellent article on the Edison Gold Moulding Process. But Rose's enthusiasm has him citing a shipping figure of 600,000 cylinders a day which is clearly exaggerated. Readers can find the lower documented totals in the December 1973 issue of APM.

The other phonograph articles, by Jim Lynch, Bob Halgrim, and L. M. Marken, are fairly accurate, but some mistakes have crept in. Edison Standards and Homes with 1893 patent plates were not made in that year — the Home was introduced in 1896 and the Standard in 1898. Bettini did not produce white wax cylinders, but the regular brown ones, and Edison's first commercial records date from 1889, not 1888. One finds repeated an old myth — that John Kruesi did not know what Edison was working on when he built the first tin-foil phonograph (actually he was an extraordinary machinist who followed closely Edison's sound recording work). And even a couple of new myths — that Edison worked with Alexander Graham Bell (he didn't), and that Eldridge Johnson tried to interest the Regina Music Box Co. of Rahway, N.J. in the manufacture of disc phonograph records around the turn of the century and himself did only $500.00 worth of business in 1901. In reality, Johnson grossed a million dollars in 1901 and netted around $180,000. He was hardly a man in desperate straits! And finally, the first coin-operated music devices produced in America or Europe was a phonograph, not a music box.

The articles on music boxes and other mechanical music devices are really superb — the book's strongest point. Everything is generously illustrated with sharp black and white photos, and the text is accurate and well-written (although p. 789 mysteriously re-appears on p. 790). The MBS is most fortunate in having a talented membership which both collects and writes. The Repair articles are extremely detailed, with many sources of supplies listed for tools, etc. that are equally useful for phonograph hobbyists. And the Historical accounts frequently read as detective stories. Phonograph collectors can now fully appreciate the conceptual leap which Edison and Cros had to make to shift from a device which created music to one which recorded it. Interestingly, the automatic music devices which utilized paper rolls to re-enact a particular performance did not appear until after the phonograph.

This is a book to browse in and re-read, and perhaps could only have been improved by including the original dates of the separate articles. The MBS has grown from 20 members in 1949 to over 1500 in 1975, and the interests of the Society have consequently grown to cover many related areas. This hefty book, at $15.00 for members, and $20.00 for non-members, is a fitting tribute to their first twenty-five years. The book may be ordered from The Musical Box Society International, 495 Springfield Avenue, Summit, N.J. 07901.

distinct possibility that the number of dots between the word PAT'D and the tiny mold number has additional importance, much like the dots used to denote various editions of The New York Times. A dot might stand for each original master record. Thus two dots, plus a small 6 might mean a record cast from a working mold made from the 6th female sub-master made from the 2nd original wax recording. But that is just a guess!
